TESTED THE MALT; INTOXICATES? SURE!

Man Tried Suspected Beverage—Got Drunk and Knew It.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 3.—Invited as a paying guest and apparently assured of immunity from arrest should the festivities become exciting, Charles H. Bates took two glasses of a particular brew of malt to a party at the residence of Dr. George G. Haggard, a prominent prohibitionist, to prove that the malt is intoxicating.

The case that suggested this drink-party was that which John Revack, who was charged with selling liquor without a license, won because the police failed to prove that the malt he sold would intoxicate.

The report of a chemist was not deemed sufficient to prove that the malt is an intoxicant. The case has been referred to the chief witness for the prosecution. When the case was called Bates told the court he had purchased two glasses of malt from Revack and with a friend went to the home of Dr. Haggard.

"There was chatted pleasantly for a time," he said, "and then I drank eight glasses of malt."

"Did the malt have any effect on you?" asked the judge. "I should say it did," replied Bates. "My feet would not work. My tongue got big, and I nearly lost my memory. He then explained that he knew the action of intoxicating liquors and had drunk them before. Therefore, when his heels hit hard and his memory went he knew he was drunk."

ORIENTAL COOLERS WANTED WEST

A petition will be presented to President Roosevelt next week asking that the Chinese exclusion laws be repealed. The document is in the hands of H. D. Kercheval, of Sacramento, representative of the International Equality League of California, composed largely of fruit growers who want to see Chinese coolies as laborers in their orchards.

After stating that Chinese labor would increase the products of the State and therefore the opportunities of employment of white labor in the transportation and distribution of such products, the petition says:

To save California from the decadence of her industries, to be unable to sell our demand admission to this State, in equal numbers, of Chinese and Japanese free laborers, to the detriment of this demand we pledge every energy and effort that the instinct of self-preservation can call into action."

Members of the four colored regiments of the United States Army, now serving in the Philippines, seem to be unable to hold their own in comparison with the white soldiers, when it comes to the matter of "final taps." In a letter received at the War Department from General Wood, commanding the Philippine division, five deaths of soldiers were reported during the month of July—two from illness and three from accidents. The victims of the fatal accidents all were colored.

John N. Vance, Troop K, Tenth Cavalry, which was sent to the Philippines during May, died of typhoid fever. Stephen E. Barton, Company F, Twenty-fourth Infantry, which has been stationed in the islands nearly eighteen months, died of typhoid fever. William Thomas, Company I, Twenty-fourth Infantry, lost his life by falling from a window July 2.

Deaths of the two white soldiers were as follows: Frank Wingfield, Company F, Second Infantry, July 10, typhoid fever; Daniel H. Stott, Company 2, Eighth Infantry, July 21, dysentery.
